Market Review*Equity

Equity markets continued its upward trajectory in October, as positive sentiment on a potential US trade deal with China, a robust US third quarter GDP and solid earnings season supported the markets. Over the month, both US and China's trade negotiators have offered positive signals that trade talks have been making headways. Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve moved to cut rates again by 25bps, the third cut for the year and signaled that they will maintain rates at this level for longer. Over in the UK, the European Union has extended the deadline for Brexit to January 2020 after the UK failed to agree on a Brexit deal.

Key Asian markets also fared well, notably with Japan and Taiwan outperforming as technology sector led the gains over the month.

Domestically, the FBM KLCI underperformed against regional peers, despite chalking a gain of 0.9% MoM. Malaysia Airport Holdings Bhd was a key detractor on continued uncertainties over the regulatory asset base framework and potential reduction in the passenger service charge for the international travelers. Additionally, Kuala Lumpur Kepong Bhd was negatively impacted by a stake divestment from a foreign shareholder. On the other hand, financial names were the best performers during the month on rotation into the oversold sector with lower expectation on interest rates cut this year. The month of October also saw the release of Budget 2020 by the Ministry of Finance which was, in overall, moderately expansionary as the government is targeting a narrower budget deficit of 3.2% of GDP.

Domestic key commodities fared relatively well with crude palm oil staged a rebound for the month, rising 14.8% to RM2,308/MT while Brent crude oil slipped 0.9% to end at USD60/bbl. Meanwhile, the ringgit strengthened 0.2% against the greenback.

The FBM KLCI were mixed against broader market, with the FBM100 gaining 0.7% MoM while the FBM Small Cap Index rallied 5.4%. Foreign net selling decelerated further to RM485 mil in October, compared to net outflows of RM2.6 bil in August and RM559 mil in September.

Relative to the region, the FBM KLCI underperformed MSCI Asia ex-Japan Index, which gained 4.5% during the month. The top performers were Taiwan (4.9%), India (4.5%) and Singapore (3.8%). Meanwhile, the worst performer was Thailand (-2.2%).

Fixed Income

The US Treasury (UST) curve bear steepened in October 2019. 2-year, 5-year and 10-year UST yields changed -10, +7 and +10 bps and closed at 1.52%, 1.61% and 1.77% respectively. The selling pressure was driven by a global risk-on sentiment on the back of a reported tentative agreement between the US and China, added with Brexit optimism.

Meanwhile, the Malaysia Government Securities (MGS) yield curve tracked UST movements. The 3-year, 5-year and 10-year MGS yields changed -1, +12 and +14 bps. Due to fading expectations that Bank Negara Malaysia will cut the overnight policy rate (OPR) during its 5 November meeting, both the MGS and GII yield curves witnessed a solid selling pressure across all tenors with the focus at the belly to the back-end.

Fund Review

In Oct 2019, the Fund generated a return of 0.82%, outperforming its benchmark return of 0.58%. The performance was mainly driven by underlying equity funds, including Manulife Investment Asia Pacific Ex Japan and Manulife Investment Shariah Progress Plus Fund, and also good stock selections in our direct equity investments. On a year-to-date basis, the Fund registered a return of 3.81%, outperforming its benchmark return of -1.44%.

Market Outlook*Equity

Due to the deteriorating global economic outlook, major central banks have responded swiftly through monetary policy actions with interest rate cuts and bond-buying. The US Federal Reserve cut interest rate for the third time this year in October while the European Central Bank cut rates to record low in September and announced a new bond-buying programme. The measures seem to have assured investors as US market hit all-time high in early November while government bond yields moved up. Sentiment in the US is also supported by better-than-expected third quarter GDP growth and non-farm payrolls in October.

In Malaysia, with Bank Negara standing pat on interest rate in November, we could see interest in banking stocks coming back as fear of more net interest margin compression has subsided. Meanwhile, the plantation sector also saw buying interest recently as crude palm oil price has been trending up on expectation of weaker supply growth next year and demand to be supported by biodiesel mandate in Indonesia. With banking and plantation being two major sectors of the benchmark FBM KLCI Index, we could see a rebound in the Malaysian market given that it has been the worst performing market in the Asia region so far this year.

We reaffirm our investment strategy of focusing on undervalued companies with earnings visibility and growth potential. We also favour stocks which have dividend yield appeals and are defensive as a cushion against market volatility.

Fixed Income

Although the de-escalation of the US-China trade tension has improved market sentiment and caused yields to retrace upwards, uncertainty and volatility linger as the "mini-deal" has yet to fully materialize. At this juncture, most investors are at the edge of their seat, awaiting outcome from the negotiation between both countries; market could move either way depending on the outcome of the negotiation. Over the longer term, global economy is still expected to slow down and central banks worldwide remain dovish and committed to accommodative monetary policies - a positive for the bond market in general.

Bank Negara Malaysia (BNM) kept the Overnight Policy Rate (OPR) unchanged at 3.00% in November 2019's Monetary Policy Committee meeting. Nevertheless, there is still likelihood of a rate cut by BNM in the coming months, depending on how the global economy fare. We retain our positive outlook on the local bond market, supported by a dovish BNM and strong domestic liquidity.
